caravanserai

in the Levant

For centuries the caravanserais operated along the Silk Road, in Middle East and Central Asia. These roadside inns accommodated traders, travelers and pilgrims along roads and in cities, facilitating exchanges, trade and multicultural relations between regions and people throughout Middle East and Central Asia, between East and West.

The Caravanserai Project is both a visual rendering of the caravanserai and a metaphorical rendering, as platform for multicultural exchange and communication between Middle Eastern and Western worlds.
